How to write an analytical essay...step by step

Make sure to read the essay prompt or question you are answering in your essay first so you know what you are supposed to be talking about. Next brainstorm on that idea and make a rough outline of those ideas so you know how you will organize your essay. Next write out a rough draft and have someone else read it for ideas and proofreading. Finally type your essay in MLA format and do one last check for proofreading errors before you turn it in.

Introduction paragraph

The first sentence of an introductory paragraph should hook the reader into reading your essay. It should provide some kind of interesting or relevant quote, thought, or statistic.

The next two to three sentences should give sufficient background information so that your thesis statement will make sense. The background information should include the title, and author's name as well as relevant information for the book. Only a little bit of plot summary is necessary as I have read the book and don't need to read it again ☺.

In between the background information and the thesis statement should be a transitional sentence. This sentence helps the reader connect the book to a larger theme or idea that you will be talking about.

The thesis statement should be the last sentence of your introductory paragraph and it should answer the teacher's questions or prompt. A thesis statement is an opinion that you will prove in your essay. A thesis statement is never plot. A strong thesis statement should take a stand on your issue, justify discussion, express one main idea, and be specific.

Good examples:

"Oedipus Tyrannus conveys the powerful concept that humans do not control their own destiny, and no matter what heights they achieve, they cannot escape the will of the Gods."

or

"Because the Internet is filled with tremendous marketing potential, companies should exploit this potential by using web pages that offer both advertising and customer support."

Not so good examples:

"Night was a powerful book with many examples of cruelty."

or

"There are some negative and positive aspects to the Banana Herb Tea Supplement."

Body paragraphs

Each body paragraph should begin with a topic sentence. A topic sentence is telling the reader what that paragraph will be about. Topic sentences are never plot, but are a thought or an idea that you will prove. All ideas and quotations introduced in this paragraph should relate to this topic.
